CONSTRUCTION FACTS

- The AquaTheater pool is 17.9 feet deep; the largest performance pool at sea.
- Allure of the Seas[®] is 75 feet longer than Freedom-class ships.
- The Central Park Neighborhood is the first ever (along with Oasis of the Seas) living park at sea with over 12,500 plants including 56 trees some of which are 24' tall. All plant material is contained in 2200 modules in 46 planters plus two Living Walls containing 70 tons of planting mix and all automatically irrigated with sea water that has been processed pure.
- 5,070,632 lbs. of water in the swimming pools.
- 110,231 lbs. of ice cubes made every day.
- 4,700,000 lbs. of fresh water consumption per 24 hours.
- 181 grand blocks were used to construct Allure of the Seas[®], each block weighed approximately 1,200,000 lbs. (600 metric tons).
- Allure was constructed out of 500,000 individual parts.
- 150 miles of piping.
- 3,300 miles of electrical cables.
- 158,503 gallons of paint.
- 1,614,586 square feet of air conditioned area.
- 968,751 square feet of carpet.
- 86,111 square feet of windows.
- 7,000 works of specially commissioned art.
- The building of the cruise terminal 18 in Fort Lauderdale took 62,572,500 pounds of concrete, the weight of 782 18-wheeler trucks; 33.3 miles of conduit; and 153 miles of wire, which would stretch from Fort Lauderdale to Key West.
